MERCHANTS URGES SEWER

Committee of Ten Appointed at Meeting of the Business Men's Association Last Night to Attend the Council Meeting Next Tuesday Evening and Ask the City Fathers To Hasten the Preliminary Work.

IS THE TOWN'S URGENT NEED

It was suggested by a member of the merchants' association last night that the council appoint a committee of five Greencastle business men to work with it in arranging for the building of the proposed sewer system. Why would this not be a good suggestion for the council to adopt?

A committee of ten, appointed by E. M. Denny, President of the Merchants' Association, at the regular meeting of the association last night, will attend the council meeting next Tuesday night and urge the councilmen to hasten the work of securing a survey for the proposed sewer system.

The sewer question was discussed at length by the merchants last night. It was the opinion of all those present that the time for immediate action was at hand. "It is not a question of a sewer or not, but a question of how soon can a sewer be put in" as one of the members put it last night. That Greencastle must have a sewer, and have it as soon as possible, was the opinion of each man present at the meeting last night.

Must Have a Sewer System.

At the suggestion of Charles Zeis, President Denny, appointed a committee of ten to go to the council meeting next Tuesday night and ask the council to lose no time in getting a preliminary survey and getting to work on the sewer. It is believed by the merchants that work on the construction of a sewer should begin as early this spring as possible and that the sewer should be the best obtainable.

The committee appointed by Mr. Denny to visit the council consists of the following: E. M. Denny, chairman, Charles Zeis, W. P. Sackett, Charles Arnold, Conrad Gautier, Charles Broadstreet, H. S. Smith, J.

W. Sutherland, J. K. Langdon, Earl Lane.

Discuss Merchants' Convention.

The convention of the Indiana Retail Merchants' Association to be held in Indianapolis, January 19, 20 and 21, was discussed at the meeting last night. Several measures of importance to the retail merchants of the state will be discussed at this meeting and it is desired that a large delegation from Greencastle attend. A committee composed of Charles Broadstreet, John Cannon and W. P. Sackett was appointed to arrange to see that as many as possible attended. The committee may secure a special interurban car if they get sufficient encouragement from the business men. This, however, is left in the hands of the committee.

One of the matters to be taken up at the convention is to attempt to secure the passage of a garnished law at the present session of the legislature. The proposed law provides that 10 per cent of a man's wages may be attached each week for debt.

Would Urge Passage of Bill.

The proposed legislation will be before the legislature during the convention of the retail merchants' association and it is desired that every merchant who can be present to urge the passage of the bill.

A communication received from the Indianapolis Retail Merchants' Association in which it asks that the local association endorse some proposed legislation drawn up by the Indianapolis association was considered. The local association voted to recommend only one plank of the proposed legislation—the plank for a uniform system of bookkeeping. President Denny was instructed to reply to the letter.

The meeting last night was fairly well attended and very enthusiastic. The association, hereafter, will meet regularly on the evening of the second Friday of each month.

MRS. O'DANIEL BREAKS ARM

Icy Weather Proves Fatal for Two Greencastle Residents—Dr. Mullinix is Badly Shaken Up.

MANY ARE STORIES OF ESCAPES

The slippery coat of ice proved fatal this morning to many of the Greencastle residents who mistook it for an unusually heavy fall of dew. Nearly all of the people who ventured down town during the morning are telling stories of how they fell or just escaped from falling down the front or back steps of their home. Although the accidents were very numerous and dangerous, only two have resulted in inflicting serious injuries.

Mrs. U. V. O'Daniel, of East Seminary Street, slipped and fell on the stone flagging in her back yard as she stepped out of the kitchen early this morning and fractured her right arm. Dr. McLaughlin was called and dressed the fracture and Mrs. O'Daniel is doing as well as could be expected.

Dr. F. Mullinix, of South Indiana Street, fell in a similar way at about eight o'clock. He was starting down town and failed to notice the ice on the front walk, and being of heavy stature his fall resulted rather injuriously. His right hand was cut and he was badly shaken up. Dr. Sudrinski was called and gave the necessary medical attention.

Robert Athey Hurts Face.

Robert Athey, son of County Recorder Athey, left the court house this morning to go home and aid his mother to reach the office without accident. On his way he himself slipped and fell face downward, severely injuring his nose and blackening his eyes. He was taken to a physician who stated that no bones were broken, though the bruises were severe.

"The Death of the Saloon."

The pastor of the College Avenue Church, asks the Herald to make announcement of his Sunday evening subject. He will give the moral, political, industrial reasons why the saloons must die in this country and country, and extends an invitation to all who can to hear the address.

The ABC and XYZ of ADVERTISING

A SERIES OF TEN TALKS ON ADVERTISING No. 7
Given by Seymour Eaton of Philadelphia

The advertising science is anything but exact. It is an easy matter to diagnose symptoms. But in advertising, as in medicine, very different causes produce very similar disturbances; eye strain, a wobbly steamer deck, or green watermelon; each means an upset stomach.

But there are some broad general principles which are as permanent as the eternal hills.

Mouth to mouth talk is the great secret of popular advertising success. As a general rule people are short on talk. They are always running out. The hopper must be fed. The shrewd advertiser scores every time he produces a new topic of conversation. If he fails to make people talk about his goods he makes them talk about himself. They wash with his soap or drink his tea or rub on his axle grease just to get in touch with him.

Talk can be created about the most commonplace things; baked beans or tooth powder or linen collars. You need only to know what switch to turn on.

Human nature has not differed for six thousand years; but the point of view is constantly changing.

If the people remained the same; if business conditions remained the same; if society and the weather remained the same, then the advertising of last year would apply this year. But it doesn't. The point of view is different. We are in a continuous turmoil of change. The successful advertiser must live right up even with the clock. Advertise every day to meet the conditions of today. An advertisement that made a big hit last year may fall flat and dead this year. There is in everything a fullness of time; a season when the fruit is ripe; periods when all conditions seem to lead themselves to success. The advertiser must have discernment sharp enough and vision clear enough to know the year and the month and the day of the month in which the people are not only living, but in which they are thinking.

Make goods or entertainment or social position hard to obtain or scarce in amount and then it is that people fall over each other in the mad rush to see somebody else get left. The moment you put up the bars and say "Don't" then it is that people want to climb. The sweetest apples in your neighbor's orchard are those on the tree nearest the dog.

GOODPASTURE IS RELEASED

RIG SUPPOSED TO BE HIS OWN

At 3 o'clock this afternoon Chief Bain released Goodpasture, who is believed to have been led into the affair with his companion and had no criminal connection with it. It is also believed he told the truth when he said he owned the rig. Chief Reeves did not send the local authorities any word about the rig, hence Mr. Bain thought there was no reason why Goodpasture should be detained any longer. He at once returned to his Putnam county home, probably a much wiser man.—Brazil Times.

POSTOFFICE BUILDING SOON

E. M. Denny States That the Government Architects Will Take up Plans for the New Federal Building Within a Few Months Eleven Plans Before Ours.

TWELFTH OUT OF FOUR HUNDRED

Work on the plans for Greencastle's new federal building will be begun by the Government Architects before many weeks. Appropriations for 400 Government buildings have been passed by Congress on which the architects have not yet begun work. Of these buildings Greencastle's is the twelfth in line.

That is plans for eleven of the buildings will be drawn before the plans for the one to be built here. As soon as the architects have completed their work on the Federal buildings now under construction they will begin on the plans for the new ones.

This assures the speedy drawing up of plans for the Greencastle building. E. M. Denny, who is the authority for the above facts, states that he believes that the actual work on the building here will be begun before many months.

CHILD'S PLAY IN THE SENATE.

To the unbiased observer the action of the Republican majority in the state senate resembles nothing so much as that short-sighted shrewdness which is peculiar to children. The new rules adopted have no definite end in view. They are not calculated to aid the Republicans in passing any legislation in which they, or the people, are interested. They are calculated only to preserve to the Republican majority a few appointments for their political following, a matter that is not usually considered the chief work of a parliamentary body. The committee appointments are still more the product of childish jealousy and political horse play. It appears that the Republican committee on committees first found what the Democratic senators wished in the way of appointments and then carefully gave them something else, a stroke of statesmanship that will doubtless be much appreciated by the voters of the state. Men fitted for special lines of work and research were carefully placed upon committees which will deal with problems with which they are utterly unfamiliar. It is probable that statesmanship of the brand of Senator Wood's of Lafayette saw in this move a chance to put the minority members of the committee at a disadvantage and to make easier the work of the Republican majority which has so much to do looking after its political fences that it wishes to devote only a minimum of time to actual legislation. The people have elected men to the senate to pass laws, or repeal those already passed, as the case may be. They wish the best thought of the men best equipped. We do not believe that the peanut politics of the Wood-Bland type will appeal even to thinking Republicans the state over.

POLISH IMMIGRANTS.

They Have Spread Over the Great Cities of the West.

The Polish immigrants have spread over our great West, and the cities of Buffalo, Chicago, Milwaukee, Pittsburgh, Cleveland, Philadelphia, Detroit and Toledo are the main centers in which they congregate.

In Chicago alone there are more than 250,000 of them, forming the largest Polish city in the world after Warsaw and Lodz. They come from all sections of the former commonwealth, but principally from Galicia. They are, in general industrials, frugal and soon amass a competency.

Comparatively few professional men or members of the upper social classes have come to this country except for political reasons, as the love for the fatherland is so strong in the Polish heart, although a few such spirits as Modjeska and her husband have lived here.

With all their national love for ceremony and social intercourse, the American Poles have many organizations through which they satisfy their social and military instincts.

The Polish National Alliance, educational and benevolent, with a membership of over 50,000 is the strongest of these organizations, but there are many others with more limited fields.

In the United States the Polish national government is conducted under the auspices of this Polish National Alliance (Zwiazek Narodowy Polski). The membership of this organization is increasing at the rate of from 6,000 to 7,000 a year.

The alliance has nothing to do with party politics, but aims primarily to make the Polish residents of the United States good citizens of the land of their adoption without forgetting their Polish tongue and traditions. It endeavors to perpetuate the knowledge of the Polish language, literature and history, and to lend organized assistance to the cause of Polish independence in Europe.

In the Alliance building in Chicago is published the "Zezda," the official organ of the Alliance, a well-edited weekly magazine with a circulation of 50,000.—"Poland, a Knight Among Nations."

LAKE CALLED SPEAKING GOD.

Superstition Arising From Beating of Waves on Beach.

Manitoba Lake, which lies north-west of Fort Garry, and has given a title to the province formed out of the Red River region derives its name from a small island from which in the stillness of the night issues a mysterious noise. On no account will the Ojibway approach or land on this island, supposing it to be the home of the Manitou, the "Speaking God." The cause of this curious sound is the beating of the waves against the "shingle" or large pebbles lining the shores. Along the northern coast of the island is a long, low cliff of fine grained compact limestone, which, under the stroke of the hammer, clicks like steel. The waves beating on the shore at the foot of the cliff cause the fallen fragments to rub against each other and to give out a sound resembling the chimes of distant bells. The phenomenon occurs when the gales blow from the north, and then when the winds subside, low wailing sounds, like whistling voices, are heard in the air. Travelers assert that the effect is impressive, and that they have been awakened at night under the impression they were listening to church bells.

How Ostriches are Selected.

In selecting ostriches for menageries or zoological gardens, the swiftest are chosen; not because it will be necessary for them to run in their new quarters, but because swiftness is a good indication of health and robustness.

One of these agents visited a pen of ostriches in Africa. At his call, two beautiful birds came up to him. Being desirous of testing their speed, he arranged with the keeper that they should run a race; so he released the birds, and showed them a handful of figs, of which they are very fond.

The ostriches were held while the visitor walked to a certain distance. At a signal they were set free, and began to run for the figs. They came bounding along at a terrific rate, taking twelve or fourteen feet at a stride.

They ran neck and neck for more than half the distance, their wings working like arms and making a great sound. Presently one drew ahead, and, looking behind, as a boy in a foot race might do, to see where his rival was, and finding the other one beaten, the winner slackened his pace and gently trotted up for the prize of figs.

Colors of the Sea.

Sea colors are generally unstable. The beautiful sea-plants that tempt us in the rock-pools along the shore lose their brilliancy when taken from the water. The dying dolphin shows all the colors of pearls or opals, coming and going on its shimmering side. The sea itself is chameleon like in its changing hues. One who has ever sat upon the shore and watched the colors coming and going upon its surface will find it hard to tell what is the color of the sea. As a rule, bright green indicates shallow water, the lighter the tint the more shallow the depth. Dark blue water is a sign of great depth. But even blue water at a distance takes on a dark green hue. Careful observations have shown that even in the deepest water the basal color is some tint of green. In our own experience we have observed that when the lead was thrown in mid ocean, where the surface color was dark blue, the plunge revealed a flash of brilliant green in the opening water.

Fate of Pins and Hairpins.

By a series of experiments conducted in his back garden, a gentleman has discovered the answer to the conundrum, "What becomes of pins?" He has found that pins are resolved into dust. Hairpins, which he watched for one hundred and fifty-four days, disappeared by rusting away at the end of that time. Bright pins took nearly eighteen months to disappear; polished steel needles nearly two years and a half; brass pins had but little endurance; steel pens at the end fifteen months had nearly gone, while their wooden holders were still intact.

Alphabet of Other Races.

The letters in the alphabet of the different nations vary in number. The Sandwich Islanders have twelve, the Burmese eighteen, Italian twenty, Bengali twenty-one, Hebrew, Syriac, Chaldean, and Samaritan twenty-two each, Latin, twenty-three, Greek, twenty-four, German, Dutch and English twenty-six each, Spanish and Slavonic twenty-seven each, Arabic twenty-eight, Persian and Coptic thirty-two, Georgian thirty-five, Armenian thirty-eight, Russian forty-one, old Muscovite forty-three. Sanscrit and many of the Oriental languages have fifty each.

Animal Immunity to Drugs.

Certain substances which are deadly in their effects upon men can be taken by the brute creation with impunity. Horses can take large doses of antimony, dogs of mercury, goats of tobacco, mice of hemlock, and rabbits of belladonna, without injury. On the other hand, dogs and cats are much more susceptible to the influence of chloroform than man, and are much sooner killed by it.

The Empress' Wedding Gift.

The Empress of Germany's private wedding present to her relations always consists of a very plain traveling clock, for she values among all other virtues that of punctuality.

The Angel Unawares

Hanson sat looking absently at the soft green hills and the motionless trees living in the July sun. He was sitting on an upturned pall, in the shadow of the big, empty tent, which would soon be filled with a merry, happy crowd. The afternoon performance was over, and in all the throng he had seen but one familiar face. To be sure, he had not much time to notice faces as he dashed around the ring in his pink tights and went through his tricks and feats of horsemanship on the back of his beautiful "Molly," though he was especially watchful today. Yet it was not likely that he should know any of the students, for it was three years since he had been graduated here from the law department of the university, and those who were now seniors had been only freshmen at that time.

And now, as he sat on the upturned bucket in the shade, alone, he was thinking over all the old college days. It was the first time he had been back in those three years, and there passed through his mind the memory of all that had happened since he first returned to his home in Iowa with his head full of law, and with the same indolent, happy-go-lucky nature with which he had come to college.

He reviewed the year or more in which he had tried to settle down to be a lawyer, and the end of it failure—which would probably have been the end of any course he might have chosen. Then the drifting—no, he had not been bad nor wild, but certainly worthless. And it had ended that he was riding as Signor Colon de Tornos—on the bills—with one of the big circuses, for he had to do something for a living. All his boyhood had been spent in the saddle, out on the western prairies, and he was as much at home on the back of an unbroken horse as an ordinary person is in a rocking chair, so it was nothing for him to learn a few more showy feats for the general public to applaud. As for the costume, it was very much like his gym suit, except in color.

His thoughts reverted to the girl, woman now, whose face had shown him an astonished and yet quiet recognition. She was a town girl whom he had once known well. He decided suddenly to go and see her before his night's work began; she would make allowance for the untimely call, as she knew how he came to be there.

So he started into the dressing tent to change his clothes, and as he reached the flap door, a girl with a small, neat figure appeared in it and said to him:

"I say, Carl, if you want any supper, you'd better hurry up."

She was one of the trapeze performers.

"I guess I don't want any supper tonight. I'm going for a walk," answered Carl shortly, and passed in. He hastily put on his quiet suit of blue, brushed his hair and arranged his tie with extra care, and walked quietly from the grounds. Only a few inevitable small boys were around besides the peanut and lemonade men. All the town people were at supper, so Hanson could observe the familiar houses without being himself observed. He was on his way to see Miss Nelson. He eagerly noted that things had changed very little. As he passed his old fraternity house he half started to go in, but after a moment's hesitation, he went on. He didn't know these men.

When he came to Miss Nelson's it occurred to him, as it had not before, strangely enough, that however good friends they had been, Miss Nelson might not be pleased to receive a circus performer, and at the idea he stood still and scowled as he thought it over. Then, with a grim determination, he quickened his steps, and firmly rang the bell. What would she think of him now—she who had hoped great things of him?

It seemed a long time before the door was opened, and by Miss Nelson herself. Neither knew just what to say. Everything he had thought of saying flew from his head, until she somewhat nervously held out her hand and said:

"Carl!"

Hanson gave a sigh of relief as he entered, to find that she had not turned him away. So they talked, and Hanson told what he had done since last they met, hanging his head as he spoke, as one confessing a crime. And she listened gravely and told him how truly disappointed in him she was, and she recalled all the old plans and ambitions that Hanson had confided to her, and he hated himself more and more.

Before they realized how late it was, they saw a stream of people going towards the circus grounds, and this brought Hanson back to the hard reality that he was under contract to appear elsewhere. He jumped to his feet as he looked at his watch.

"It may be a long time before we meet again," he said. "Do you know, you have done me a great deal of good this evening. You have waked me up."

"Ah, but your ambition does not last long," she answered sadly. "Will you really try, I wonder?"

Hanson winced.

"What are you going to do?" she persisted relentlessly. Hanson said nothing for a minute.

"I—I don't know."

"Something better than this?"

"Yes—yes, Kathleen, I will, I swear. I will. I promise you," he said, taking her hand.

"Then auf wiedersehen, Carl. I shall believe in you."

"God bless you, Kathleen. I must go now." And after shaking her hand he dashed down the street, and Miss Nelson watched him until she could no longer see him. There were tears in her eyes as she turned from the window. But this Hanson never knew.

As he came to the door of the dressing tent, he met the trapeze girl again, and wondered, as he often did, how she came to be there. It never occurred to him that she might wonder the same about him. She was utterly different from the rest of the women, who were many of them coarse and harsh voiced, with painted-out faces and red hands. He had come to be on friendly terms with the trapeze girl, though she was peculiarly proud and reserved.

Already the band was playing loudly in the other tent. The latecomers were straggling in. Outside, the flickering oil lights intensified the darkness beyond. Hanson had just time to change his clothes before he had to appear in the ring. Tonight a wild, buoyant recklessness filled him, the reaction from his previous earnestness. He rode magnificently, heedless of danger.

It was a relief when he had to leave town the next morning. On the train he wrote a long letter to Miss Nelson, but on re-reading it, he tore it up and took twice the time writing another page long. He still had a month to stay with the circus, under his contract, and what he should do after that, he still did not know.

He was watching the trapeze girl one night about a week after this, and as she swung in mid-air he became quite annoyed to see the man on the opposite trapeze catch her hands in his and swing both to and fro. Hanson had always disliked that man, he was a bad character, and he remembered now that Francesca, the trapeze girl, disliked him, too, but Hanson had never cared about the matter before. He was looking at them when his horse jumped a hurdle, and somehow his rider was thrown heavily and the next horse was upon him before he could regain his feet. Some women in the audience screamed, and the horses pranced, but the ringmaster hurried up and calmly ordered two "supes" to carry his still body out of the ring. The blood trickled down his face from a gash on his forehead, and dribbled along the sawdust as they took him out and laid him on a mat in the dressing tent, with its unsteady lights. As he came to they saw he was not badly hurt, and after having his wound dressed, he asked them to leave him alone.

But the trapeze girl, coming in regardless of his order, sat down beside him and put her cool finger on his hot aching head.

"Rather clumsy of you," was all the sympathy she gave.

"I was watching you," he answered meekly, as if that were a reasonable and sufficient excuse. His next remark was seemingly irrelevant.

"Who are you?" he asked. "I mean what is your real name, and how did you come to be here?"

She looked at him curiously.

"Have I never told you? All I know is that I was lost when I was quite small, and Mme. Garzon, who used to be one of the riders, found me, cared for me, and brought me up the best she knew how. She never could find out anything about my family. She died about two years ago. She was very kind and good to me, and when she died I had nowhere to go, nothing to do but stay here. Francesca is the only name I know."

"And you must be about how old?"

"Twenty, I think."

"You don't know your last name," said Hanson meditatively. Then he asked suddenly:

"Will you let me give you another name, Francesca? Will you let it be Hanson? And we'll go away from all this—"

"Oh, Carl," she said. Looking into his eyes, he rose on one elbow and kissed her. So he knew without her telling him.

In a certain western university town there is among the small boys there an annual craze for giving a circus. The ring leader is a boy about 8 years old, whose erect figure and flashing eyes command obedience from the older boys. Timmie Brown, a very good-natured fat boy, dressed in some of his sister's clothes, makes a very presentable Fat Lady, and no difficulty is too great to be surmounted by the energetic young leader, who does the "feats of daring" on old "Molly."

His mother smiles patiently as she binds up the annual bruises of the whole troupe. Both she and her husband, the respected Prof. Hanson of the university, let this bent of the boy's take its own course, knowing that he will outgrow it. Indeed, they both make the most valuable suggestions for the whole performance, and the boy thinks his mother and father wonderfully keen and observing to remember, and does not see how they notice so much just as the occasional circuses which come to town. But some day they will tell him, lest he be distressed by the remarks of gossips.

Character Counts
No Substitutes Sold

In choosing a drug store, character counts for everything, and price counts for nothing—where health and safety are concerned. We adhere strictly to the principle that quality is all that counts in medicine.

Of course, when it comes to patent medicine, toilet articles, etc., the price is well known and on those things our store has enjoyed a reputation for getting these articles for its customers at a material saving from the price elsewhere.

Our stocks are complete, and we never offer a customer some unknown concoction at a cut rate for a well advertised article which he has confidence. We are proud of our reputation in the drug business—pride with a reason, and positively assured that we can well please you, we invite you to try us, if you do not know, and continue as our friend if you now are.

Better Than Spanking.

Spanking does not cure children of bed-wetting. There is a constitutional cause for this trouble. Mrs. M. Summers, Box W, Notre Dame, Ind., will send free to any mother her successful home treatment, with full instructions. Send no money, but write her today if your children trouble you in this way. Don't blame the child, the chances are it can't help it. This treatment also cures adults and aged people troubled with urine difficulties by day or night.

It has been passed around town today that some of the Greencastle business firms are so energetic that they have begun billing or passing bills out at funerals in Fillmore and other neighboring towns.

The Tithing Band recently formed in the College Avenue Church met Friday night at the parsonage for temporary organization. Dr. Town was appointed the treasurer. There is much interest in the movement and it is expected that a large number will come into the movement.

For the last three or four days the college clock in the tower has been out of order. Presumably the difficulty is the result of the cold weather. During the morning hours the gong is sounded by hand in order to dismiss classes promptly. The time piece will be repaired at once.

Notwithstanding the fact that the rails were covered with solid ice, the interurban cars showed no hesitancy in climbing the sharp grade at the station today. This is considered to be the best test that a car can be given and the results given by their heavy cars which pass through here have more than satisfied the T. H. I. & E. officials.

It was so cold that they all were late but in spite of that they did first rate. The township chairman could not be there.

So they waited for the county chairman to take the chair.

J. L. Hamilton of Greencastle, was kind indeed.

To send out a piano when they were in need.

Of one, to have some music, just for a treat.

By Miss Iva Perry, who can't be beat.

J. H. Nichols was asked to offer prayer.

Then a talk by Mr. Anderson of Pike County or somewhere.

It was all about sheep from the best to the worse.

Discussed by Mr. Robe and L. T. Harst.

Then what to do when the hens go on a strike.

(We ought to have asked the man from Pike) But Mesdames Pickett and Cooper told us the profitable way.

To raise lots of chickens and make hens lay.

By this time, 'twas noon. Eat your lunch and be back soon.

Then L. G. Wright tells us agriculture must be taught.

In all our country high schools, if they don't do it they ought.

He gave good advice to parents, about school.

Boys and girls might be brighter, if we follow this rule.

But Roscoe Todd didn't quite agree with him.

That it was just as easy, as it would seem.

To know, just for sure, how much water.

It would take to raise 50 bushels corn per acre.

Now Mr. Anderson tells what to do with the land.

Do "this"—if its clay or "that"—if its sand.

Then Mr. Jones had a few things to say.

About building the land up to make it pay.

Just now several good men gave us a talk.

LOCATES OFFICE HERE

The Herald takes pleasure in calling attention of its readers to the fact that the physicians of the Spaulhurst Institute of Osteopathy, established nine years, fifth floor, State Life Building, Indianapolis, have opened an office at 117 South Jackson Street, and will make regular visits every Tuesday and Friday.

The Spaulhurst Osteopaths are physicians of learning and experience, having received their training immediately under the founder of Osteopathy at Kirksville, Mo.

It is gratifying to know that these successful physicians are again in Greencastle where genuine Osteopathic treatment is so much needed. We bespeak for them the liberal patronage and support to which their ability and cures entitle them.

Dr. Spaulhurst's splendid success here six years ago is convincing proof that they are unquestioned in skill, unusual in ability, big in heart and full in sympathy which inspires them to diligence in personal, earnest effort to restore to health those who are disabled or sick.

They make no claims beyond the simple facts and conditions, neither will they advise treatment unless relief or commensurate benefit is possible, hence we commend them to the afflicted who really wish to get well. Their treatment is neither hard nor painful—not a cure all, but it makes more full and permanent cures of rheumatism, lumbago, sciatica, neuralgia, headaches, catarrh, asthma, paralysis, poor circulation, stomach and bowel disorders, than all artificial methods.

"The Family and the School."

Dr. Banker delivered a massive, solid, rugged address last night at the Locust Street church prayer service on the important theme "The Family and the School." He said that the civilization of a nation is determined by its religion, that Christianity has given the world its highest civilization, but that a higher civilization will yet be reached when Christianity is better understood and more fully practiced, that the three leading ideas of christianity were altruism, the family as the unit of society and the mental, moral, and spiritual education of every individual. So, he said, the family ought to be protected, provided for and developed, divorce ought not to exist except for adultery, and parents ought to treat their children with justice as well as to expect obedience from them. On education, he said that christianity provided not only for teaching, but for original research, for new truth, and that we should welcome, rather than repel new discoveries of truth.

A large congregation heard Dr. Banker and listened with close attention. Professors Harris and North will speak tonight on "The Signs of the Times."

A Horrible Hold-Up.

"About ten years ago my brother was 'held up' in his work, health and happiness by what was believed to be hopeless Consumption," writes W. R. Lipscomb, of Washington, N. C. "He took all kinds of remedies and treatment from several doctors, but found no help till he used Dr. King's New Discovery and was wholly cured by six bottles. He is a well man today." It has proved a most excellent medicine for Stomach, Liver and Kidney troubles. We regard it as one of the best family medicines on earth." It invigorates the organs, purifies the blood, aids digestion, creates appetite. To strengthen and build up thin, pale, weak children or run-down people it has no equal. Best for female complaints.
